

Brake pads

Posted by rd7839 - 05 Jun 2011 16:08

Does anybody have a set of front brake pads they are willing to sell? I ordered new rotors but thought I had new pads still in the box but it turns out I only have new rears.

I'm not sure I'll have enough time to have them shipped by racetime this weekend unless I overnight them but that's not cheap.

=====

Re: Brake pads

Posted by 944Racer72 - 09 Jun 2011 21:52

Never heard that one before. I've used new pads and rotors many times with no problems once the pads bed in.

=====

Re: Brake pads

Posted by Big Dog - 09 Jun 2011 21:53

The problem with Charlies story is that if you change pad compounds, you need to turn the rotors. Different pad materials can be incompatible with each other and cause inconsistent braking while the old material wears off the rotors, at least according to the folks at CarboTech. As long as you are using the same compound, Charlies story MAY be OK, not saying that it is, just saying that it MIGHT be.

Big Dog

=====

Re: Brake pads

Posted by 944Racer72 - 09 Jun 2011 21:55

Now that I agree with. Although as cheap as these rotors are, I would replace rather than have them turned.

=====