

GT3 seat acceptable?

Posted by 993inncc - 10 Apr 2013 04:03

In my quest to buy a track car, I'm realizing that the seats most use in their cars are the typical Sparco, Omp etc seats and they are just entirely too thicklyadorn with padding for my tall torso to fit the car with a helmet comfortably.

I have 2 factory GT3 seats that I used in my 993 when I tracked it. I love the seats, comfort with minimal padding and a one piece fiberglass bucket in the same winged design and proper openings for harness as the above mentioned seat mfg's.

It's not an FIA "race" seat, but does follow the rule of being solid and one piece.

Would it be allowed with a seat back brace?

why can't I add a pic to this?

=====

Re: GT3 seat acceptable?

Posted by Sterling Doc - 10 Apr 2013 20:29

The NASA CCR would regulate this, and it says surprisingly little about seats. Tube frame seats are a verboten, and back braces are required for non-FIA seats. Fire proof material may be an issue on the GT3 sets, but you should be technically legal.

=====

Re: GT3 seat acceptable?

Posted by 993inncc - 11 Apr 2013 02:32

Well how fire "proof" are dash material or interior bits allowed to remain in general? I can't tell from either NASA or PCA what the ruling would be on the seat. Who in NASA would make the ultimate decision? The seat isn't leather, it's perlon I think its called. Sort of like the material used on the inside of helmets...a foamy breathable material. If I could post a pic, I'd show the seat but the sites not letting me for some reason.

=====

Re: GT3 seat acceptable?

Posted by vpk944 - 11 Apr 2013 06:43

Just use it. And add a back brace.

=====

Re: GT3 seat acceptable?

Posted by Sterling Doc - 11 Apr 2013 10:23

The CCR only lists it being "recommended" that fire resistant material be used. My suggestion would be to look through the CCR, and then ask your local tech inspector - the chief tech inspector in your region has final say, as the CCR is a NASA ruleset, not controlled by 944 Spec.

=====

Re: GT3 seat acceptable?

Posted by 993inn - 11 Apr 2013 11:54

Ok so the newbie question. There are numerous tech stations around the state all 2,3, and 4 hours away from me..... so how do I know who is "chief"?

=====