

Clutch Master

Posted by Big Dog - 01 Nov 2011 13:01

My clutch master leaks - BAD.

I have found rebuild kits for the slave but not for the master. I have to believe that it is used in other cars but Paragon, and others, do not know of a rebuild kit for the master and a new one is $$$$.

Any ideas out there about a less expensive option than buying a new one?

Big Dog

Re: Clutch Master

Posted by RacerX - 02 Nov 2011 11:57

Have you tried ebay? I'm sure they have rebuild kits. If nothing else you could pick up a used one and clean it up.

Re: Clutch Master

Posted by michaelreich - 04 Nov 2011 09:58

I do not know how you feel about them, but I just bought a new one from Rock Auto for $71, including shipping.

It looks like it is good quality. I generally have had good luck with them.

Let me know if you need the 5% discount code.

Re: Clutch Master

Posted by Big Dog - 04 Nov 2011 14:09

Michael, it is a NEW clutch master for $71. That sounds like a great deal compared to Paragon and others. I believe there is an early version and a late version with the late one costing more than the early one.

I would like the 5% discount code and will check on the cost of the late version.

Thanks.

Jim Foxx

Re: Clutch Master

Posted by michaelreich - 04 Nov 2011 17:25

Put the following number in the space "how did you hear about us?"

69255825748301

Let me know what you think.

Thanks,

Michael

Re: Clutch Master

Posted by cgktexas - 10 Nov 2011 04:55

Big Dog wrote:

My clutch master leaks - BAD.

I have found rebuild kits for the slave but not for the master. I have to believe that it is used in other cars but Paragon, and others, do not know of a rebuild kit for the master and a new one is $$$$.

Any ideas out there about a less expensive option than buying a new one?

Big Dog

Just found a clutch master kit on eBay for $41.43 with free shipping

Item 130599500305
